General Manager, John F. Harris.

Each Committee is expected to meet at the call of its Chairman, and to organize by the selection of such of its members as may be deemed advisable to serve in sub-committee, and yet every committeeman and every person in Pickens County interested in the welfare of the County and in the success of the proposed Fair is urged to contribute in any way he can towards making the Fair a success. It is the purpose to make the Fair of 1909 an improvement on that of 1908, if possible, and this we hope to do by profiting by the experiences and mistakes last year, eliminating such features of the program of last year as may now be seem advisable, and adding to the program such features as may commend themselves to the good judgement of the several committees. We want to make the stock and farm products features of this Fair a grand success. The music and amusement features will be given their full share of attention, and the ladies department will be even better than it was last year, and in this the Fair Association invites the co-operation of the ladies, and asation and assistance that can be given them. Let everybody get his mule, horse, or any other animal he may have, in shape by that time. Get to work to raise creditable exhibits of farm products, because prizes will be offered that will be worth competing for.

Respectfully,
W. J. Bolt, T. J. Mauldin,
Sec., President,

Celebrating His Birthday.

Editor Sentinel-Journal:
Please allow space in the S-J for me to tell your readers of another birth day dinner.

On the 25th this scribe and his better half found their way to the hospitable home of Joel R. Griffin where we found several of his friends and neighbors and father, Captain James A. Griffin for whom the day was celebrated, it being his 70th birth day. He had his good lady with him and we felt good when we met her for you know she is a daughter of Rev. W. B. Singleton, deceased, who your scribe held in very high esteem. Those people are of the old Enon crowd with whom we used to live in the days of yore when we plowed the big ox, but then that's not telling of the dinner or the day as I started to do.

Well, when we arrived we found all enjoying themselves and Capt. Griffin as spry as a boy of 16 instead of the man of 70. We all gathered in the sitting rooms and cracked jokes, etc., and finally were listening to Capt. Griffin's narration of "war tales" when some one announced that it was time to prepare for dinner. All seemed very obedient to this command as they responded without a murmur. When all were ready we were shown to the dining room where they had all kinds of good things to eat which we would like to describe but we are not familiar with the names of all those delicacies, but I do know that the dinner would have been a credit to any home.

We noticed the progress that Mr. Joel Griffin has made in the last 10 years since he lived in the little cottage. He now has a beautiful home and is fixed up well in every way and when we took in the surroundings we did not wonder at he and his good lady giving a feast in honor of his father, which the captain stated was unexpected to him but was appreciated. We want to say just here that Mr. and Mrs. Griffin have been other-wise blessed as they have some nice, bright children. Miss Nina, the oldest one was very prominent in making things pleasant and handy in the dining room and the scribe naturally enough thought that if he had life to go through again now he would focus his attentions somewhere near Joel R. Griffin's.

It seems silly to talk hard times when prosperity is evident in every home that strives for it. Afterwards we all assembled in the parlor where we had some nice music and at half past four we all took leave, and the 70th Birth Day celebration of Capt. Griffin was a thing of the past. A Friend.
